ABSTRACT

This directory is intended to serve as an information resource for libraries that may be contemplating card catalog closing by providing a list of 607 U.S. and Canadian libraries that have closed their old card catalog files. The report includes reference information for 286 academic libraries, 235 public libraries, 11 school libraries, and 75 special libraries. All categories of Canadian libraries are listed at the end of the report. Data for each library are presented in the following format: (1) the library's name and address; (2) the type of online system used; (3) the year the catalog was closed; (4) the collection size; and (5) a contact person and phone number. The Task Force on Card Catalog Closing convened in 1988. The Task Force was sponsored by the Catalog Form and Function Committee (CFFC) of the American Library's Association's Cataloging and Classification Section. The group's original charge read:

> "Within the past decade many libraries have closed their catalogs, and continued coverage in some other format (e.g. COM online, or book catalogs). Other libraries are investigating the possibilities of catalog closing.
>
> The Catalog Form and Function Committee Task Force on Card Catalog Closing is charged with compiling a list of libraries that have closed their old catalogs. The list is intended to serve as an information resource for libraries that may be contemplating catalog closing ..."

A review of library literature revealed few references pertaining to this topic; one report, published in 1986, was the result of an on-demand survey of 34 selected ARL libraries that had frozen their card catalogs.

The charge to the CFFC Task Force was to elicit responses from a variety of libraries. A survey was developed and approved for distribution at the June 1989 ALA annual meeting. ALA distributed the survey to 1800 institutional members in January 1990; responses were subsequently received from over 600 libraries. Additionally, notices concerning the Task Force's work appeared in LJ Hotline (May 5, 1989), RTSD Newsletter (14:4; 1989), DYNIX Dataline, the AAAL Newsletter (October 1989), Communique (5:6; 1989), and the OCLC Newsletter.

The survey responses included: 286 academic libraries, 235 public libraries, 11 school libraries, and 75 special libraries.

Once the surveys were returned, Task Force members began the process of creating a database to record this information. Data were entered using Microsoft Works database then transferred to the WORKS word processing package. Results were organized in the following manner:

Library name:
Library Address:
City: State: Zip:
Online catalog:
Year catalog closed:
Contact:
Phone number:
Collection size:
Library Type:

Since some time had passed since the original receipt of this information, all entries were checked in the American Library Directory 1991/1992 in the fall of 1992. Since some libraries had migrated to a new online system, the new online catalog was reported to the list; phone numbers were corrected, as were some volume counts. Contact persons were not verified, therefore this information may be outdated in some cases. If a library did not fully complete the survey, an attempt was made to complete the information using the American Library Directory. However, in some cases this was not possible and some surveys are not included in this final list.

The libraries are listed according to the following categories: Academic, Law, Public, Special; all Canadian libraries are listed at the end of the report.

Many libraries indicated that they had not yet closed their catalog. These libraries were omitted from the final report. While it is true that many academic libraries have closed their catalogs there are many other libraries, even academic libraries, that have not. It is hoped that this list will meet the needs of the small library contemplating automation to a large library that is still supporting a manual and automated system.
